 This Week on Kickstarter

JULY 19, 2012

This week we've got a homegrown radio show about design, a movie theater for bike-lovers, and Charlie Kaufman's first animated film.

99% Invisible: Season 3

by PRX, Inc

 Category Journalism

 Location San Francisco, CA

Now you see it

99% Invisible is an independent radio show and podcast about architecture, design, and all the thought that goes into the things most people don't even think about. Originally produced on a shoestring budget in creator Roman Mars' living room, topics can range from airport terminals and parking meters to — wait for it — the Darth Vader Family Courthouse.

Charlie Kaufman's Anomalisa

Charlie Kaufman's Anomalisa

by Starburns Industries, Inc.

 Category Animation

 Location Burbank, CA

Life in stop-motion

The first animated feature from beloved indie auteur Charlie Kaufman (Being John Malkovich, Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind), Anomalisa follows the story of a man who has become crippled by the mundanity of his everyday life. Produced in conjunction with Dan Harmon, the creator of Community, and animation studio Starburn Industries, the team will bring their unique world to life outside the Hollywood studio system, and true to Kaufman's original vision.

Bike-In-Theater (NYC+SF)

Bike-In-Theater (NYC+SF)

by Jason Anello and Anna Boyarsky

 Category Theater

 Location San Francisco, CA

A cinema on two wheels

Combine warm weather with bikes and '80s movie nostalgia and what do you get? A perfect summer evening. The Bike-In-Theater is a free, pop-up cinema that invites hundreds of riders to watch a movie outdoors while snacking on goodies from local food vendors. This year they're going bi-coastal, but with Bike-In-Theater's handy DIY kits, you can build a bike-in right in your own driveway.
