Sir,

I do not want you to have to dwell on this - It is my understanding that my wife called Andrew to see if he had seen an email about her not being allowed in the night before after I informed her that one had been written. Andrew said he had heard about it but not seen it and asked her to submit her side in writing. She then did do so.

I have found out Donna had on a 1920's flapper's dress costume coming from the couples halloween get together she attended across the street. Andrew told Donna he thought Mike thought she was a call girl trying to ring herself up to a unit - that is why he adamantly would not let her go up. Donna did tell Mike who I was and who I worked for as well as what unit we were in (this all was about 11:30 pm I was told) but to no avail.

That is why she became finally very upset and was only let in after [REDACTED] was awakened and asked to come down to verify who she was. It does not seem [REDACTED] was happy about being awakened.

Donna is still going to apologize to Mike.

I do know Donna has not had any problems with the other doormen, in fact she brings them dinner down when we have too much left over.

Best regards,

Mark
