Just had a conversation with Benny. I told him everything as you advised. He was very pleasant and repeated many times that money doesn't matter. I can tell him any number i want and he will change the invoice. So I asked if it is fare if I would tell 45k as Sotheby's is H color and he sold G. He told me again he doesn't care and he will change the invoice to any number i will tell him as your friendship is the most important. He also told that the invoice he email is wrong. The correct invoice for you should be 59k, as the person that prepared invoice didn't know it is for his friend.

Few minutes later he called again and this time he sounded worried. He told that he checked again the price with a diamond dealer and was told that 78k is a great price for such great quality stones. He asked that i do a very serious research on rapaport diamond report and call GIA. .... He claims that the stones bought at Sotheby's have a different quality and we can't compare.

Jeffrey, I have a friend who is working for diamond dealer. I sent her the certificate for appraisal. Here is what she wrote:

We checked the Rapaport list and the prices are the following:

2.21 carat is $22,900p/c

2.20 carat is $20,100.p/c

It means that the list for the first stone is $50,609 and the second stone $44,220. Total is $94,829 less 25% is $71,121

Please advise.

Thank you

Jeffrey,

I am forwarding the email that I sent yesterday to [REDACTED] from Benny.

Today I had a call from Benny. He told money me that money does not matter between us. He gave you list price less 25%, but will accept any payment you are willing to pay. I have to give him the amount and he will revise his invoice. I have attached retail pricing from website Blue Nile that has similar pricing to original invoice which would not reflect his 25% discount.

Please advise

Thank you

Bella

[REDACTED],

Please clarify the following issues:

1. Who did you use for appraisal and what does it mean for insurance purposes?
2. Is it a dealer price, wholesale or retail price?
3. Is it a grid price or discounted from grid. We were told that Jeffrey normally gets 30% off grid. Is that not accurate?

Thank you,
Bella

Thank you for the email Bella....

As Benny would never take advantage of his friendship with Jeffrey, the appraised value comes in at 78k as of today.

Waiting to hear back.

Thanks!

[REDACTED],

The appraisal came in 51k, so we are waiting for Jeffrey talk to Benny.

Thank you,

Bella
