The term "sale or exchange" is a term used in the federal income tax law to refer to such a transaction. There's no identical description in the NYS sales tax law.

Mark, Please email us the basic definition of a sale for purposes of the NYS sales tax law.

Sale or exchange ia a term used in tax law to refer to a transaction in which value is received, triggering a gain or loss for income tax purposes. A sale or exchange is distinguished from inheritance, gifts, or other transactions in property which do not result in a calculable gain or loss.

Can you find any authority under the NY sales tax law that;

1. A sale between a grantor trust and its grantor is either subject to or not subject to the sales tax. or
2. If a grantor retained annuity trust is funded with art and the annuity payments to the grantor are subsequently funded with interests in that same art that:
 - a. the transfer to the grantor annuity trust is either subject to or not subject to the sales tax
 - b. the annuity payments made with interests in the art are either subject to or not subject to the sales tax

I know there is authority that grantor retained annuity payments funded with real estate interests will be subject to the real property transfer tax.

If you don't know what a grantor retained annuity trust is you can call either me, Elyse or Amy and we'll explain it.

Yes - the trust pays and then leon would pay if he took it back.

Remember when you're thinking about this issue that it's not really a substitution power. We refer to it as that but if you look at the trust language, you will see that that's not what it says. It says that the settlor has the power to reacquire and acquire trust property by substituting therefore other property of an equivalent value.

the person who pays the sales tax is the person who is acquiring the tangible personal property, i.e., the paintings. yes - it could happen multiple times just like it can happen with individuals. If, for example, I hold a painting for investment purposes and make a section 1031 exchange, I pay sales tax. If I make a second 1031 exchange, I pay another sales tax, etc.
