Officials at Saudi Arabian Oil Co. have told their superiors there is a hitch in the plans to take the state-owned oil company public: It is likely worth at least $500 billion less than the government previously suggested.

The country's deputy crown prince, who is leading a push to overhaul the economy, has pegged the value of the company known as Saudi Aramco at $2 trillion. But officials working on the deal have struggled to come up with a scenario under which Saudi Aramco is worth more than $1.5 trillion, according to people familiar with the matter, even after factoring in a recent tax cut and other tools the government has to make it more attractive to investors.
