I never thought Schadefreud could be so fun!

Will try to hold off announcing Andreessen Horowitz as long as possible. They are worried about a leak from their own side -- just folks talking casually in a very small community.

ok

wall st journal hot on the cnbc link I sent below. the person who interviewed me asked me about it off camera and clearly put all the pieces together (how the hedge guys do their proxy stuff). amazing they got rick Sherlund to front them--he took MS public at Goldman.

I trust your guidance.

do you think I should heads up anyone -- press or hedge fund folks? I don't want anyone concluding negatives about me -- I am in a good PR spot right now.

jay sad compensation committee meets on june 12. the early draft I saw had a 2 week cooling off period. it is very close to being 7/1 based on that.

If you think it is worth waiting we could literally stall a bit.

there's a lot going on with hedge funds. they threatened proxy battle over board seats. they are caucusing top shareholders. it is now a concerted effort. he's going to lose.

see [REDACTED]

not sure how this factors in but the interesting thing is what he says to the comp committee over why this is needed--he couldn't even let someone go competently :-)

If you think your efforts paid off and he looks foolish, then why wait?

You tell me? So much fun to be had.
