Sorry I've been in back-to-back meetings here in Las Vegas at Goldman internet conference -- and didn't realise it was you until I saw voicemail much later.

I've heard back from No.10 -- the Paris embassy isn't able to sort this out. Rather incredibly, the UK Embassy in paris contracts out all its visa applications to an outside agency (hence having to mail the application) and that company does the fingerprinting, vetting etc. Only in emergencies can the embassy issue temporary visas. So I fear it won't be possible to sort for this weekend.

What the PM's team has offered is when [REDACTED] is in New York, i.e. next week, to have the Consulate-General take care of it in 3-4 days. I'm in touch with Danny Lopez, the new HM Consul-General and I'm to notify him when she's ready to submit.

I know this doesn't solve Saturday but should take care of the next 5 years.

Best wishes,

Ian
