 This Week on Kickstarter

FEBRUARY 16, 2012

This week, learn to make a home-cooked meal worthy of a Michelin star, watch an up-and-coming designer use old-school science to create a brand new look, and get a glimpse of the moon's surface that would make even an astronaut envious!

Take me to the moon

Using NASA's recently released elevation data, cartographer Jeffrey R. Ambroziak has created a dazzling 3D map of the lunar surface that gives us a glimpse of the moon once only imagined in science fiction. The massive two-sided image, available exclusively through Kickstarter, will let backers explore every nook, cranny, and crater of our favorite celestial neighbor.

Hulletta

by Hayley Martell

 Category Fashion

 Location Baltimore, MD

Material girl

Design student Hayley Martell combines traditional crafting techniques, like knitting and embroidery, with some basic chemistry skills — like "thioxing fabric" and altering material with special dyes — to push the boundaries of garment making. The result is a collection of unique, sculptural clothing that, although constructed from primarily found materials, looks wholly new.

App/Cookbook from Lark & Chef John Sundstrom

by John Sundstrom

 Category Food

 Location Seattle, WA

Reservations not required

John Sundstrom, the James Beard award-winning chef behind popular Seattle restaurant Lark, is creating a cookbook app that will feature 90+ of his favorite recipes alongside step-by-step instructions, behind-the-scenes videos, and mouth-watering food photography. He'll also invite backers to test-drive recipes and share feedback — 'cause there's no such thing as too many cooks in a cyber kitchen.
