I pushed send without finishing the email, but will always highly appreciate your prompt reply! And your advice is the only I ever consider! I really love you for this and all your help!

I'll struggle a bit longer as I'm hungry for knowledge.... I'm just afraid this won't take me far!

Every morning when I walk to work I think of the first advice you ever gave me! To be a PA at a very high level! I've started low, but with high ambition and always willing to improve ill get there one day! Sometimes I I get lost on the way and when I'm feeling weak I'm thinking of you, and all the patience you had with me! I respect you and your advice as no one was there for me in life taking decisions except you! I'm at a point, after improving my skills when I feel under appreciated, but due to my work permit legislation I just need to be quiet and accept other ppl decisions. Is been a while since you told me to go for love and the person who is capable of giving me comfort and a family, but there is something that stops me! I might have been wrong so far, but I know you know me more than anyone on this world!

He proposed, I accepted, but we still live in different countries for almost a year now, and that's only because of me, and my silly PA career!

Are you in london next week?
Xxx

I would highly appreciate your advice on this! What is more important ? Career or love? I already postponed love for few months because you know me very well, I'm way to independent (even though I'm starving at the end of the day)! [REDACTED] hired this new CEO that at the moment I'm assisting within [REDACTED] company, [REDACTED] which is someone I'm really looking up to, and admiring his career development so far. As the company is in a very sensitive situation, salary increase is not in their radar,so somehow 'employee exploitation' is a common commodity I believe that with my skills can 'earn' a bit more than £1200 a month. I've been with no financial support since I joined working for this company, and I'm very happy happy with the work experience I'm earning
