Subject: Projects We Love: A Visit to Kingdom Death

Date: Thu, 09 Feb 2017 22:35:44 +0000

With the help of the Kickstarter community, four-time creator Adam Poots raised a record-smashing $12.4 million for Kingdom Death: Monster 1.5 — and built a gaming miniatures empire. He shares more on making the leap from reluctant startup employee to a full-time creative career in this video visit to Kingdom Death.

Here are four more projects from creators who've returned to Kickstarter to bring new ideas to life.

Banner Saga 3

By Stoic

After creating the critically lauded Banner Saga in 2014, this innovative team of collaborators is back to produce the third and final chapter of their sprawling RPG trilogy inspired by Norse mythology.

Bold EP and Tour

By Mary Lambert

Two years before making Grammys history with Macklemore and Ryan Lewis, Mary Lambert launched Petal, her heartbreakingly beautiful debut EP, on Kickstarter. Now she returns with Bold, a collection of songs celebrating self-acceptance — be one of the first to hear it.

Make 100: 100 Waves

By Lee Walter Mothes

Building upon his previous explorations of fictional coastlines, artist Lee Walter Mothes presents a new series of one hundred swirling works inspired by his childhood spent on California's beaches.

Mini Museum: The Third Edition

By Hans Fex

For his third Mini Museum project, creator Hans Fex has curated a new collection of twenty-nine authentic specimens — including tiny space gems, a swatch of Steve Jobs' turtleneck, a piece of Alcatraz, and more.
