Anne

I regret to inform you that I have reached the decision that [REDACTED] must leave Camp Frontier today. There have been numerous serious issues over her time with us and they continue. As per our procedures an incident report has been created for many of them and will be forwarded to you upon request.

Of the more serious problems (violence, threats, disobedience, extreme disrespect, et al), any one would be enough for me to consider expulsion. As all the the above have occurred and on many occasions, I have a greater responsibility to protect my other campers from her. We have an outstanding staff who have worked for 12 days to help her to adjust to camp and to correct her behavior. I am convinced now that she will not improve. When even the emails I requested you send from home do not work we have no other option. Even our Camp Director/Administrator, Dianne, has spent many hours working with her with no results as have the Camp Life Director, Counselors and Cabin Director.

[REDACTED] has had some issues too but seems to be following [REDACTED] lead. [REDACTED] is on warning but may remain at camp as long as no other issues arise and she continues to improve. The unused four week tuition will not be refunded due to her expulsion, as you are aware. This amount can be held on credit for [REDACTED] for next summer provided that she successfully completes her time with us this summer.

I must request that [REDACTED] be picked up today. Please inform me as to the time and name of the person coming to camp. We will have her ready for check out at the infirmary. She will be informed of my decision shortly and moved to the infirmary so as to minimize issues with other campers and staff.

I sincerely wish there was another solution but my responsibility to the other 70 plus children and staff is now greater. With over twenty years experience in youth camps and education, it is rare that a problem child can not be reached. In [REDACTED] case, I'm afraid there is no possibility here at camp. I wish you all the best.

At the point, all communication is to be with me directly. I look forward to your reply.

- Brian Collar, Camp Director
