Myths & Facts: Online Exclusive

Is the Palestinian Application to Join the International Criminal Court (ICC) a Response to Israel's Failure to Negotiate Peace?

The records of Israel and the Palestinian Authority toward negotiations are well known. Israel has consistently called for direct negotiations while PA President Mahmoud Abbas has refused to meet with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu (except for a brief encounter in 2009 when no talks were held) since he was elected in 2005.

The election of Barack Obama stimulated new hope that the United States might finally force Israel to capitulate to their demands. The Palestinians were quickly disappointed, however, when it became clear that Obama was unable or unwilling to do so.

Palestinian Imam Lays out Islamist Agenda

On November 20, 2014, The Washington Post's front page headline reporting on the cold-blooded murder of four Israeli Rabbis and a Druze policeman by Palestinian terrorists at a Jerusalem synagogue read, "Synagogue attack stirs 'religious war' fears." It would have been more accurate, however, to say the victims were the latest casualties of the radical Islamic war against the Jews.

Few people in government or among the media elites want to admit that a religious war has been going on for decades because it would not be politically correct. They don't believe there are such things as religious wars in the 21st century, even as they witness Shiites and Sunnites slaughtering each other in the name of their interpretation of Islam, Hindus and Muslims at odds in Pakistan and India, and a host of other religious-based conflicts across the Middle East and North Africa.
