Hi wonderful man,

I will get straight to the point... I've approached several charities and have run into two main snags. 1. For the larger ones, the bottom line is that this set up creates suspicion because they are so heavily regulated and examined and because I have not been working for them for many years, the salary would be an issue.

The smaller charities have told me that they often don't even make in a year as much as I would be being paid and they cannot justify it. Both are afraid of the IRS scrutiny. Both want to know where the salary is coming from specifically.

How shall we proceed?
