Subject: Projects We Love: Virtual Worlds

Date: Wed, 06 Nov 2013 19:10:31 +0000

We just celebrated our first year in the UK, and can't wait to see all the projects that launch in Australia and New Zealand next week! Exciting stuff on the horizon.

 Ever, Jane: The Virtual World of Jane Austen*Ever, Jane: The Virtual World of Jane Austen

By Judy L. Tyrer

It's not every day that you hear about a new video game based on the world and works of, um, Jane Austen. But that day is today! In Judy Tryer's Ever, Jane, you're not trying to shoot Mr. Darcy with a laser cannon. The weapon of choice in this game is gossip.

 Lavabit's Dark Mail Initiative*Lavabit's Dark Mail Initiative

By Ladar Levison

As news spread about the vast reach of the National Security Agency, LavaBit, an encrypted email service that was used by Edward Snowden, came under so much scrutiny that its creator decided to shut it down. Now he's working to turn the service's underlying software into freely available open-source code, with improved encryption.

Play AR

By mark skwarek

Augment your reality. That's the premise behind Play AR, an app that enables you to overlay real-world images with pretty much anything you can imagine — dragons, castles, wizards, whatever you can dream up! Once you've built your own world, invite your friends to come play in your twisted reality.

Share your work with the world.
