Update:

I found that the blue tos-link cable which connects the mac to the stereo was slack. I adjusted it in the optical port and taped it in place for the temp, since it no longer seems like a snug fit. I am testing now to see if it holds.

I will do some research to see if I could find a "wireless" solution or if there is a longer tos-link cable available to replace the blue cable so that there is no strain on stereo rack.

Good day boss

Is it a clipping (it plays then no sound then it plays again) that was happening, because that is what I am hearing now. I will update once I isolate the problem
