Ok. I always assume your intentions are good...so if you had no intention of teaching me, I don't quite understand the point in your first email. Is it simply to say I told you so ?

I have no desire or long forgotten hope of teaching you anything. I told you i would try to find a solution. i have done so. i am not finished trying.- not a green card for the friends son girl , just a solution. - this is a circumstance that you have created.. not me. jean luc i thought might bend. you told me he could not have been nicer to you. NOT THE CASE

I know, you're right. I can't change the past..
I've done all I could getting new photos since september with zero help. I just got an offer to be a face & model ambassador of a new charity affiliated with the UN. They love the model/pilot idea and that's how they want to promote it. You told me last week you were able to find a way to get a green card for a complete stranger in 4 days so she wouldn't marry your friend's son. You've been saying you would help with mine but nothing has happened in 6months. Seems odd, that's all.. I understand your frustration but this is too important to be used as your tool to teach me a lesson.

The last thing i want to have happen is to re-argue things that were unpleasnt for both you and I.. though i repeatedly said that if you did not go on castings and at least tried to give an impression to others of being serious, you would find yourself in the situation you currently find yourself in.. I told you then , at that time that , if you don't do certain things, the outcome is predictable. and then you will come to me and say, what can i do now,, and i said that i will say i don't know.. you make decisions , that have easily seen consequences, . I m not sure how to move forward,, this immigration fund is not the answer.
