

From: Reid Hoffman <[REDACTED]>
To: Jeffrey Epstein <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Subject: Update from Reid: July 2014
Date: Wed, 30 Jul 2014 22:30:40 +0000

---

Update from Reid

To: Jeffrey

In a previous newsletter, I shared our HBR piece about the tour of duty framework, explaining how it helps employers recruit, manage, and retain entrepreneurial employees.

Our new book The Alliance: Managing Talent in the Networked Age is a continuation of this work.

If you've already read the book, I'm interested to hear your feedback — both positive and critical — and learn how you're thinking about implementing the frameworks in your organization.

In case interesting:

- We created a slideshow summarizing some of the key ideas of The Alliance. LINK
- We collected some press related to the book, such as my interview with Charlie Rose. LINK

Separately, I co-authored an essay with Julie Hanna on how crowdfunding and Kiva are disrupting old banking. I think you'll find it worth the read, and I encourage your feedback here, too. LINK

All the best,
Reid

reidhoffman.org • @reidhoffman • unsubscribe • update profile

© 2014 Reid Hoffman, All rights reserved.

You are receiving this email because we are connected on LinkedIn.

