I made contact with a manager from TOTAL Aviation today.

They are willing to do business with you. A few things they would require is:

*Type of Aircraft(jet)

*Tail number

*Whether you have "under or over wing fueling.

The fuel they use to fuel their crafts with is "Jet A aviation fuel", so if it's what you fuel yours with, that's good.

He did mention that for fueling private aircrafts they'd need a "spot sail" or pay as you're serviced with a "check", in lieu of becoming an "established" customer They require that they know when you would be arriving on Stt. and when your leaving for fueling purposes.

He cautioned me that they would be only responsible for the fueling of your jet if you decided to do business with them. All the other customs, VIP services as he put it, would be solely your responsibility. Reason behind that is in the past they have fueled private crafts and the catering service(St.thomas jet center, etc) would discontinue those services or give the client a tough time due to the fact that they were being fueled else where.

I didn't let him know who the potential client was, but he gave me his number in the event you do decide to do business with them.
