The table cloths were made by a place on 3rd and 58th..Interiors by Royale. We just have to pick a fabric from D&D Building and they can make whatever we want. I am planning on being in NY next week for a few days. I can look for fabric then if you like; just let me know what kind. If you want Chinese print, maybe the Chinese place in soho sells fabrics.

I appreciate and am very grateful for all of your support and generosity in every aspect of my life. It's been a bit of an emotional roller coaster for me the past few months dealing with transitioning into a new life and everything changing for me in my life. It's very exciting, but extremely stressful and confusing at the same time. Not to mention traveling every 2-3 days to some remote town around the country trying to figure how to have my own identity in these new surroundings and new life with all new people around me. It hasn't been easy and I haven't figured it out yet. Yes, the wedding planning has taken most of my free time but its temporary. It will hopefully be a one time occurrence in my life and I want it to be special. And since I've never planned a real wedding before, it's taking a bit more time and there's a lot more involved than just any old party. I'm OCD..I want it to be perfect. I have done alot of thought about to do next for myself. I don't know yet. I have to try and figure something out which I can do on the road. I've discussed more projects with Kathryn which would involve a website which would need to be updated and managed every week, which would be something I can do just with my computer. Even if it doesn't make money, it would be a good skill to have practice with. My life is making a 180 degree change. It's going to take time to adapt and figure out the best way to make a transition. You are my family and most trusted friend as well. That hasn't changed. I'm sorry if I've been distant. I'm just trying to figure it all out.
