Myths & Facts: Online Exclusive

Do human rights organizations present unbiased reports on Israel?

Human rights organizations regularly pillory Israel for real and imagined abuses. Israel frequently argues that these groups' research is shoddy, biased, falsified and untrue. The groups see official Israeli channels as less credible than Arabs who are often proven liars, unreliable witnesses and members of terrorist organizations.

In a rare example of candor Human Rights Watch (HRW) investigator Donatella Rovera admitted some difficulties in reporting on armed conflicts. "Responding effectively to human rights violations and humanitarian crises resulting from armed conflict requires accurate and credible factual information and analysis." Sadly, these essentials are often missing from the reports of HRW and other human rights monitors.
