thanks MB. I am talking to ARnie about round the clock care. He can't do 24/7, but will do as close to that as possible. He just needs a few hours break to recharge himself. Warren is basically needs full attention.

I commented earlier that I believe his condition is very fragile and he can die at any point; I would be surprised if he lasts 3 weeks; (note I have not SEEN him in 10 months). Linda has lost it but since WARREN requested he die at home I think it would be best if Linda has the proper supports and he stays at home. I talk to her daily and I think she will get by; she will collapse emotionally once he does die irrespective if it is in his home or at a facility. As long as she knows we are supporting her I think it can be done. Years from now there wont be any guilt she didn't carry out his last wishes. There is no getting around the profound sadness of this miserable death.

Michael,

With your experience how much longer do you think he has? Also, as this progresses do you think he will reach a point where he is no longer aware of his surroundings? If so, at that point it might be best for [REDACTED] sake to move him to a care facility.

I agree, lets try to keep him at home. His dignity is shot and his situation is irreversable. Let him stay in his own bed and pass in peace. This is still so surreal to me.

Very generous of you . He probably should be in a facility but he wanted to die at home. [REDACTED] hoping with basic 24 hour/around the clock assistance; the hospice team as needed, and my talking to her Linda will get through it. If it becomes intolerable and he is truly out of it [REDACTED] sure he can be moved. For now lets try to follow his request.

I just got off the phone with Linda. I've been talking to her every day. Warren's condition is deteriorating rapidly. As of last night he was hallucinating. Earlier today she found him on the floor and he wasn't able to get up Alone or with her help She waited for the assistant Arnie to arrive. Right now she's waiting for a wheelchair to be delivered. She's also going to request help for the nights as well She just wanted to review this with you She herself is truly overwhelmed I spoke with him last night and his speech is very garbled and his answers are somewhat confused. Just wanted to keep you informed I know Linda was anticipating that you Terry would be by today . Just think she needs reassurance that with it to support her and I have done that My senses seeing him is going to be very demanding emotionally As I Said speaking to them every day inviting her how to utilize and intervene with the hospice program I'll keep you informed
