I know I am probably the luckiest person in the world - Steve has to deal with me so he might argue he's not so lucky...

I thank God almost every day and take nothing for granted.

Will over the coming weeks bring up Lowell stuff with Boris and Bill and see what they say.

Thanks for your flexibility on carbon credits (and finance). It is only a game.

Here's the UNFCCC website to poke around and note that we operate under a few names that you might see (Waste Concern Bangladesh, W2R, and Waste to Resources). Everything you need to get started

<http://unfccc.int/2860.php>

Stevie says COME BACK - he wants you to move in upstairs from us. It's a pretty awesome empty space - the entire 20th floor. You should build it out and make a cool Seattle palace. Bill tried to buy it but Melinda told him she didn't want him to have a downtown bachelor pad.

Our building is super unique. Just a few of us up here on top of a big bank - super super secure. Plus Stevie has wired the place for bear!

Finally, one more person you need to meet out here that Boris and I hang out with a lot. His name is Sam Dryden. He's the head of our Ag program at the foundation and he is also a national treasure. Old school New Yorker too. Very close to David Rockefeller.

re Lowell. 100%... As long as Boris and Bill approved. Yesterday was a treat. Steve is great and you both are more lucky than you know. Bill was fun. He teased me as I would myself. I will get up on carbon credits by the end of summer. Thanks for your help in making the day really really fun.,

Did you make progress w Bill?

Hope JB party enjoyable.

Nice to see [REDACTED], she is such a nice person!

Stevie has some ideas for you.

Oh and wondering if you think you might want to consider Lowell in a paid advisory position for your foundation. Bill uses about 80hrs of Lowell per week, unpaid since Lowell is retired. Lowell would never ask for anything and of course would follow Bill to end of earth. Buy Nathan treats him like crap (also no pay).

It's hard to see the real brains behind the operations not being compensated and truly he is a national treasure that deserves more.
