how are you?

And I was just sitting looking at the cows eating grass and wondering about you.

I am fine - on the mental level. Otherwise: just was at HSS for a third procedure since March for "lancilating" pain (sudden, piercing, and excruciating knifelike nerve pain) in my neck. The good news, it now seems to be under control.

summer plans?

I've been working on a VERY exciting personal book project which I launched as of yesterday to great interest from contributors. See next email which is what I am sending out to potential contributors, a who's who of the leading scientific thinkers in the world. This is 51 years in the making. I am the only person alive that can pull this off. It involves paying contributors for essays and possibly running some meetings: here, London, SF, and possibly Germany or Switzerland (the most important German-language paper, NZZ (the biggest paper in Switzerland) has offered to partner with EDGE - they will take previously published eEDGE stuff and translate and run big features. I'm out all morning, back at the farm early afternoon if you want to call.
