Milken Institute will host fourth annual London Summit

 Find out more about the Summit

What's ahead for Europe and the global economy? Find out at our London Summit, where many of the world's most prominent opinion makers, executives, investors and philanthropists will gather to offer expert analysis and fresh perspectives on capital markets, public policy, science, energy and more. A signature event of the Milken Institute, the Summit will illuminate the forces shaping the times we live in—and the future.

Across America, mayors take the MI pledge

 Eric Garcetti

Recognizing the power of cities to change the landscape of aging, we are asking U.S. mayors to sign the Best Cities for Successful Aging: Mayor's Pledge. So far, more than 60 mayors have signed, committing city planning and resources toward making cities work for an aging population. The pledge makes it clear that older adults should have the opportunity to work for the betterment of cities. They can improve the lives of all generations through volunteer activity and encore careers across the government, nonprofit and private sectors. Next month we will release an update to the Best Cities for Successful Aging Index. See the 2012 index here.

Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti signs the pledge.

Lights, camera—impact!

Before Gov. Jerry Brown signed legislation last month that greatly expands funding for the state's film tax credit program, the Institute played a vital role in helping California leaders understand the economic issues at stake. Our report, "A Hollywood Exit: What California Must Do to Remain Competitive in Entertainment—and Keep Jobs," was instrumental in the meetings between our California Center staff and legislators. It provided a data-centered foundation to help policymakers understand how best incentives could be structured to create and keep jobs in the Golden State. Read the full report here.
