Yep. If slow growth becomes new normal, it will stress everything. Ended up at a picnic table w Hank, Tim, Ray and Bob. Will debrief but deep consensus. Now move from economic to political sphere. Disruptive tech which is so celebrated for consumers is a tool that is changing political landscape. Shifting power from state to individual, shifting power from edited information to unedited viral information flow, enabling deeper identity politics etc. think ISIs, Arab Spring, and Xi's perception of need to crack down. Combo of potential economic shifts, fewer govt tools and newly enabled individuals may lead to "send lawyers, guns and money, the shit has hit the fan".

Curious about Saudi. Have suggested to both CSIS and asg that they think about having this as a topic for board meetings. Tsinghua president is an influential position. His predecessor is now Min Environment. Interesting question for Party Dudes is what value system will galvanize Chinese in coming decade. Does communism mean Marx or is communism more like a living document.
