I agree, this was definitely not part of the original job description. I have to say I'm taken aback. He just can't afford to employ me, so this is the alternative he came up with. Such a shame!

I'm going to meet with Mort Zuckerman, Phil Griffin and Harvey Weinstein this week to discuss alternatives. I could also meet with James Murdoch to discuss opportunities at News Corp, although there might be too much family history to go there.

Thoughts?

you definitely need to pursue , other things,, charlie is great and would be a nice addition to a real job,, but you can't be in a position where you can become desperate. Why don't you ask MJ what he thinks. Even if you try to raise money for a china or japan show,, each one will want to know where the money is going and will look upon it differently if you say I'm trying to raise money for a show. and i will take 25 % of it. smells a little don't you think..

Thanks again for your advice and for the generous offer. I'm going to speak to him again tomorrow, so I will come back to you.

It's not an ideal situation; I now have to decide if it's worth the risk, or whether I should be pursuing other opportunities.

im in paris... I heard your vintage dress was a great success fri night.. I do not know how free his schedule really is.. ? I am very disappointed by the pay nothing approach. I would like you to work with him , as it is a good fit. I am willing to fund 60k for 3 months .. lets see how it goes. it would need to be paid to a charity.. And approved obviously by charlie.. if he has a problem with me paying you. i can try to think about some other funder.

Hi Jeffrey,

Thanks for your time on Thursday, I appreciated your advice and have taken everything you said on board.

I wanted to tell you about the conversation I had with Charlie today. I drove up to his upstate property and we had lunch. He offered me the role of business development manager; where I would represent his brand and look for opportunities for him that sit outside his Bloomberg show. The role we discussed was multifaceted:

1. Develop a number of television series - He wants to do a series on China and a series on Japan and proposed that I raise the money and help produce both series.

2. Following up on ignored opportunities - He said that he is constantly approached by different organisations that want to develop conferences and television series with him (Microsoft, AOL, Stanford University, etc), but he hasn't had the time to follow up on any of these opportunities.

3. Develop my own ideas - Whether it be a specialised conference, or television series, that could be independently funded.

But there is a catch; he currently doesn't have the budget to pay me anything... I mean $0. So I would have to wait until one of the above opportunities came off before I was paid for my time.

He concluded by saying that he wants to work with me, but it was a "reap what you sow" opportunity.

What are your thoughts? Do you think it is worth pursuing under these terms? I definitely think there are a number of opportunities I could pursue on his behalf, but for me it's all about timing and income.

Maybe I could treat him as a client and look for other consulting opportunities to augment my income?

I would really appreciate your thoughts.

Thank you again for your time and interest.
