This is our final reminder that your one-year Google Storage plan for jeevacation@gmail.com is set to automatically renew in 3 days. Unless you take action, we'll automatically charge your Google Wallet account on Apr 9, 2013.

Since you purchased this plan before April 24, 2012 - the date we updated our Google Storage plans - and have set your plan to automatically renew, remember that you can keep your current plan. It's not too late to decide whether you want to keep your current plan, purchase a new plan, or downgrade to free storage.

Keep your current plan

To keep your current plan and avoid an interruption in service, please check that your payment information is current before your plan expires. Read how to update your payment information in Google Wallet.

We'll continue to automatically renew your current Google Storage plan each year, providing you with the same storage limits for your Gmail, Drive, and Picasa, as long as your account's status is as follows:

- Current plan hasn't been changed at google.com/settings/storage
- Account is active
- Annual plan is set to automatically renew each year
- Google Wallet payment information is up-to-date

Purchase a new plan

Visit www.google.com/settings/storage to purchase a new plan before your current plan expires. After you purchase a new plan, you won't be able to go back to your current plan.

Downgrade to free storage

Visit www.google.com/settings/storage to downgrade to free storage. After you downgrade your plan, you won't be able to go back to your current plan.
