I am not even thinking of litigation yet. I have plenty of time. Marty , its wrong, we knew something was amiss. Brad continues to make trouble. and my guess it is with a back door from critten. its not nice

The basic rule - should be reviewed by Fla civil atty - is that a suit against an attorney permits the attorney to use privileged info in self-defense

The corollary - the attorney would be limited in his reliance on confidential information to that necessary to defend his position therefore the scope of waiver is related to the scope of the lawsuit

For instance - if your complaint was about a specific representation, a good argument could be made (again, the precedents need very careful checking - matter of state law) that the only confidential information that could be disclosed would be that which directly related to any decision, judgment in that specific case or any information that rebutted a claim of prejudice or damage

So go slowly, assess the upside, and then the downside of any litigation

On one hand, the voice of caution, you do not want to initiate an action that extinguishes the privileges the law firm has with you; on the other, these files should be reviewed to determine what they reflect about the duration of the overlap. Any other prior representations by Critton firm of Scarola firm?

to me

Try this on for size. Search Denny is in suit with a former partner claim and counterclaim. Been going on for awhile. Searcy is represented by crittons partner Greg Coleman. Should have been disclosed to you.. what should we do this explains crittens weird behavior,, his firm was involved as follows

2 cases:

1. Block v. Searcy filed in Leon County on 7/42010 2010 ca 002428
2. Searcy v. Block filed in Palm Beach County on 7/22/2010 2010 ca 01881

Clearly attorney client relationship existed between Searcy, Denny and Burman, Critton at the time Critton representing you. So law firm representing your adversary representing you and conflict not disclosed
