I assume this scholar.. who nevr came to the states.. has virtulaly no citations , is one of a dozen of legal scholars.. this is exactly the example of money not very well spent.. It caused no recognition in his home country, no publicity, you might have well saved 100 family and doctors.. what is the driving force here. saving lives. well that could have been used to save more.. saving scholarship that would change the world. u.s. a tribe in the congo.. touchy feely but again no principles to which you can point , that have been agreed . and followed with respect this candidate. with regard the other list of the best university in the Arab world.. again.. saying the cutest girl at the nursing home --Democratic Republic of Congo 040 / Law

This legal scholar served as editor in chief of the University of Kinshasa's law journal and has held the positions of Director and Vice President of the International Center for the Defence of the Rights of the Indigenous Batwa "Pygmies" of Central Africa. Himself an indigenous Batwa, he is a 2003 recipient of the UN International Labor Organization (ILO)'s indigenous and tribal people's fellowship and is an established expert on the concerns facing the Batwa and indigenous peoples in Central Africa. In 2003, this scholar and a colleague undertook a study which researched the Batwa's legal and penal systems. The team witnessed and documented systemic human rights abuses against the Batwa. National security forces in Kinshasa learned of their work and confiscated their writing and research materials. Fearing arrest and prolonged detention, they escaped to Switzerland in January 2004. An SRF fellowship in October 2005, renewed in 2007, supported this scholar's independent research at Bern Univeristy and Fribourg University in Switzerland on the economic and political implications of a federated D.R. Congo where he published his dissertation and numerous academic articles. He is now a visiting fellow at the National University of Ireland and the Irish Center for Human Rights in Galway
