I have been told that they spoke to you about this and that igy just changed over acctg systems, charts of accts etc and that getting you the requested time periods on an apples-to-apples basis required some manual coding. Unless people are lying to me (and I sincerely doubt that), then it is what it is. As I also indicated, many of them are on holiday and we just went through an enormous downsizing where many were terminated. As a result, we are much more short handed these days for 'special projects' than we were. So, between summer holiday, the systems migration, and a much smaller staff it is taking some time. I understand why it would be surprised because under normal circumstances one should be able to press a button. But not right now. The only alternative I can propose to you is that I use the middle eastern technique of putting needles in their nose like reported yesterday by the 'Washington Post.' Short of that I have to wait too.

Jeffery epstein has asked to see 2009 pro formas for these two properties including performance against projections and against last year's actuals. Please tell me when I can tell him he will have these.
