there are two of them.

my right oropharynx (back of nose) won't stop bleeding. it is from trauma during intubation from a recent surgery. so last night they just ligated the artery that was bleeding and it is just fine.

the other bleed is from an adhesion in my belly/pelvis from one of the surgeries. it started as a pseudo-obstruction and since the tissue is friable and not as good as some of my other (stellar) tissues, it bled. this one seems to have stopped on its own. it bled but eventually stopped because it was in my pelvis and my guts were able to tamponade the bleeding.

the confusion is really around why two bleeds at once. my platelets seem to be ok (in number) but the way we first found this weird cancer is that i had these weird antibodies to platelets that were being secreted by the ovarian tumor. also thyroid antibodies. so perhaps we are seeing early tumor, secreting antibodies to platelets and making me bleed. or perhaps, i've just some post-op complications.
