Hi Jeff,

I am not sure I understand your note. Who and what is "[REDACTED]" affidavit? Are you perhaps, referring to the sworn affidavit that "Christof" sent in his defense of AI some years back in the Mclver case, in which he refers to this professor Kosslyn? Otherwise, I am confused.

From what I am now understanding, from a letter sent by Kosslyn, he now does remember AI communicating with his lab, while he (AI) was in Christof's lab, about a particular brain patient. AI was then passed on to a graduate student of his, and they started discussing the patient with the goal of writing up a paper about it. AI posted what he was working on in this regard on his own Caltech web page, which was standard practice at the time. Mclver saw this posting, and then wrote blasting emails to Kosslyn about AI, and the whole project was stopped. It was not written/posted erroneously at the time, but now it is obviously out of date, as well as many things on that still cached page.

AI has not referred to this work again. It is not on his own website at www.illusionworks.org. I do know that it appears on a mis-appropriated page of AI's work by someone unknown in Germany, who took over AI's domain name of illusionworks.com, and repeated some of AI's stuff there, added all sorts of other things, which AI has nothing to do with, and AI has been trying in vain for many months now, for them to remove the site, but can not get them too, as they took over the domain when it inadvertently got dropped for a few days earlier this year.

In any case, I do know that AI and Kosslyn have been in contact, and the case is closed amicably between them.

Best,

Isabel

Isabel, al was merely asked if he was a student at cal tech. Nothing more. [REDACTED] affidavit implied that kosslyn also knew of al. Kosslyn has asked I, now in writing that al refrain from that claim

Sorry for all the typos. Sent from my iPhone
