No I am serious.

Today I was thinking about what an amazing life I have had and it all started when I met you!

Truly!!

You made me finish med school and finish residency and you even bought a year of my life so that I could catch up on all the stuff I missed while training.

I don't think anyone has been so fortunate and I wanted you to know that I really did (and do) appreciate it.

I know over the years I've disappointed you a few times but never on purpose. I'm still Texan, we're slow learners.

I was just thinking today that I didn't thank you enough - sometimes I forget what a critical role you played in my life. Thanks for believing in me, even when I didn't believe in me. I would've still been living in a small Texas town if I hadn't met you.
