Dear Jeffrey,

Many years ago I recognized that due to my business I have the unique opportunity of meeting some very bright and successful people.

I make it a point to learn at least one important and valuable lesson from this relationship.

With you, I have learned the value of "challenging myself" (although I am always open to further lessons).

Perhaps it is because no one has ever "challenged" our design for divans that I found myself embarrassingly complacent with regard to your helicopter divans.

Spending time with you and others in your garage forced me to think outside the box and challenge myself.

The reality is that it is you who forced me to recognize a different means of creating the comfort in the divan by simply recognizing that the back cushion would be best designed with an angled slope similar to the angle of your car.

So simple yet I did not see the "tree in the forest".

Now the good stuff -

The seat looks un-freakin-believable!

The curved bolsters outboard, the arm rests - it just looks and feels awesome! I know that your going to love this helicopter interior - the quality, the materials, the design - your gonna love it!

Thank you.

Enjoy the 21 second movie attached.

Sincerely,

Eric Roth
