Still catching up. Has been brutal few weeks. But at least that I start on some follow up.

George Whitesides is a friend that I think you would like meeting.

Not only that he is a brilliant mind – he is extremely intelligent and accomplished in Academia (he is the most cited living chemist, ex-chair of Chemistry at Harvard), Industry (he started over 30+ companies, including Genzyme, Geltex, Nanoterra etc), defense (he has been working on various defense projects for many years) but also he interest/work is spanning over numerous disciplines – biotechnology, chemistry, various energy, evolution, nanotechnology, information technology, philosophy, business etc.

Not many people can do that – and even fewer can do it well.

Attached is a Harvard Business Case study on him and his lab.

Also attached is a list of various projects in his lab and a partial list of the publication.

If you have time read his essay on various topics from – it summarize some of his thinking – from chemistry, science, immortality, how humans and computers are different, which are the major questions is science and so on.

There are some differences – he is much older, conservative and slightly uptight – nevertheless, his dry sense of humor and brilliant mind make these differences smaller.

Let me know what do you think.

Hope life is good in Florida ;)
