Jeffrey and [REDACTED],

-I am still trying to locate more EQ choices for you.

I will have George Fwd me contact info on his clients reclining seat for S76 tomorrow.

S76 seat: see attachment for completion seat spec that is currently available., it is located near the end of the document, Monday I will contact Sikorsky engineering for a copy of the complete seat specs and installation drawings.

Seat: I have been researching companies that have STC's for temper-Pedic installations like Cessna. I visited the Cessna web sight to locate the add for temper-pedic seat installation with no luck, [REDACTED], can you fwd me the Cessna Sales man that took you on demo flight? I would like to find out if that was after market installation, or direct factory option.

Thanks.,

Larry v.

JAL is using this temper-pedic for its flights, see article below:

this is an interesting web sight, [REDACTED]

Japan Airlines Unveiles New First Class and Business Class Seats

Japan Airlines \(JAL\) has created a new suite for JAL first class and a new seat for their business class which they will be introducing on US routes. The airline will launch the JAL Suite in first class and the JAL Shell Flat Neo Seat in business class when the airline introduces new 777-300ER aircraft on US routes, starting with the Tokyo - New York route on August 1, 2008.

The suite in JAL First Class are 20% more spacious than the airline's current seat in first class and only suites are available in the JAL First Class cabin set in a 1-2-1 configuration. The suite includes a seat upholstered in gray leather which converts into a full-flat bed. In the 180° position the seat combines with an ottoman located at the opposite end of the compartment to create one of the largest and widest, most comfortable sleeping areas in first class. When the seat is in the upright position, the ottoman can be used as a seat for a guest. The sliding table can be placed between the seat and ottoman. Passengers, seated in the pair of suites who are traveling together can lower privacy partitions located between them. Each suite comes with Bose noise-cancelling headphones and a personal 19-inch personal TV screen and stowage spaces for bags and small items and a laptop power point. Those in the suites can also whatever they like off the menu whenever they would like with choices of Japanese or Western full-course menus. For sleeping a cabin attendant can place a Tempur-Pedic mattress on the seat bed along with a down comforter and a pillow a well as offer special JAL loungewear.

The new business class seat reclines to 171 degrees and has a 15.4 inch personal TV screen. The business class cabin also features the "Sky Gallery," one wall of the cabin shows a a photographic exhibition that will be regularly changed over the year. The first exhibit, in collaboration with Fuji Film, will be a series of photographs of forests in Japan entitled 'Forest Forever'. The gallery will be located directly opposite a self-service bar counter, where passengers can enjoy snacks and beverages at anytime.
