THANKS!

This guy from Cisco wants to help them set up a data base with all of their employees, and charge them for that. (They can then use the data base to set up their own committees). The only tricky parts have to do with how you classify the purpose of the committee — which will drive what types of members ought to be included.... The question is whether they would be more willing to pay for that or to pay for a continual process of the sort you outline below (which does sound plausible, to me, btw)...

cheat sheet : committes are a way of life.. business, charity, arts, , govt.. they. from roman times up until the discovery of the scientific K-E , Method Of (KEMO) committee composition, relied on random criteria, senate- age , arts -wealth, juries- random . , business - diverse interests,, The K -E method of selection allows entities to submit a list of prospective participants. to the K-E, participation test. Aftwards the entity is given a proposed composition of committee , a profile that uses the most sophisticated cognitive architecure and proprietary formula, that is able to maximize the overall strength of the committee , by ascertaining that the four necessary types of cognitive processes are adequately represented .This KEMO work is an outgrowth of the Dr. Steven Kosslyn VIP brain work done at harvard.

Sounds good to me!

And I liked the "Vertically Integrated Brain" (VIP) idea...

I'll think about how deception (including self-deception) fits into all of this.

See you soon... and thanks.

I believe I have a great idea . I think you can use this in a way that would make money, get you involved with interesting people, have you work on your traslational cognitive stuff and really make a difference, If that were not enough, you would also have fun - first you will have to change the categories, into scientific sounding titles.. no one would want to be labled a " reactor ". they will all need to be positive sounding. the Vertically integrated brain, is a nice pun
