The appraiser Jay Dillon, used to head the department at Christies. I also received an email from Sotheby's, where they were interested in marketing and selling it, and saw its historical significance, and wanted to engage in an "international marketing campaign," but I turned it down, because of the uncertainty of the economic climate.

I also had several other expert appraisers in the marketplace look at this, and they were all consistent in its value, but again, this is before this market collapsed. So, I have been holding on to it, waiting for the climate to change.

I have a large file backing up this painting, documentation, letters, etc. Happy to send you the full file if you are seriously interested.

Bottom line, just want to go back to what I like to do. I would even be happy with a "bridge loan" to funding.

Cheers,
me
