Putting aside NPA, and your arguably involuntary waivers, anyone can suit in federal court relying on claims of 2255 i.e. Congress has conferred civil jurisdiction on private parties claiming injury due to violations of the various predicates. The issue is whether they can meet their burdens of proof.

since the josephbug people are suing in federal court though there is no diversity.. and they have not brought up the npa, do we leave it , without a fight over jurisdiction which is dealt with in the npa, or raise it at somepoint/
