About Us

Professional services firms face challenges that add complexity to their operations, including globalization, intense competition, consolidation and convergence, emerging technologies, rising costs and the ever-present challenge of attracting and retaining the best talent.

To prosper in this evolving marketplace, professional services firms must have vision, a well-defined strategy, disciplined planning and experienced leadership. They also need a workable infrastructure: the latest technology and information that can make a difference in how leaders run these businesses. Traditional thinking and outdated approaches must be replaced with creative perspectives tempered by practical solutions.

Since 1975, Hildebrandt has helped professional services firms advance and strengthen their businesses. Our roots are in the legal industry, and our reputation and position with law firms throughout the world is unsurpassed.

We also work with many other professional services organizations, such as large real estate developers, accounting firms, consulting firms, law schools, architectural firms and pharmaceutical firms. Our approach is to combine our state of the art consulting and analytical skills to effectively anticipate and respond to any client's needs. We don't just assess what the
