How about asking a general question first. What do you think it would take for a woman to feel secure. What are the essentials. . . and then ask her about herself

The piece will run on Tuesday or Wednesday

The editor may be willing to talk to me. The Banks team says the reporter is unethical and cannot be trusted but the editor is maybe better. If I want they can arrange a conversation w her. But I need advice. [REDACTED] continues to say no lawyers they don't help but he thinks talking to editor may be ok.

The only request I have of the editor is not using my name.

1. Their allegations were directly refuted by facts by the Bank board.
2. Im a private citizen.
3. She can reference factual reports without using names of innocent people.

Not sure whose husband or knows what?

Apparently editors don't care about lawyers so I'm not sure a threat matters.

She thinks I'm a public citizen. I don't even have Facebook or twitter or linked in and do zero public.

I do not know what I could possibly have "in exchange" for anything?

I do think there are a few factual things about his departure that seem odd to me - I told you his secretary is getting a divorce and going w him to his new job. Those are both factual and verifiable. I'm not the person having an affair w him.

Also when I worked on his office he hired his nanny's husband to work on special projects and I never knew what that was. His chief of staff seemed ok with it but I thought it was odd bc he didn't do anything.

[REDACTED] doesn't think lawyers help anything. He says they may be able to win back lawyers fees and get whatever publication to print a retraction somewhere but that doesn't seem to matter.

What I don't know is if lawyers can't help prevent use of my name.

Can they do something directly to yahoo news or their lawyers or editors to make them

not use my name

Is the threat of libel even useful to them

Things to discuss

1. Speak to editor or not - off the record and if yes does a lawyer join
2. Do lawyers help and if yes which one and also seems like voice calls over email preferred
3. Do I have information that can help them in another way

It's fine to question all of the allegations against [REDACTED]. They can say person in his office.
