Here is the quote: “Aycock and her colleagues recruited students who identify as female and who were attending one of the Conferences for Undergraduate Women in Physics, a series of meetings held at various universities. The scientists asked participants to answer a questionnaire about sexual experiences,... Of the 455 people who responded, 338 reported experiencing some form of sexual harassment, including gender harassment — such as being ignored because of their sex or gender, or being told inappropriate jokes — unwanted sexual attention or a combination thereof during the previous two years. The incidents had taken place in settings associated with physics: including in research labs, classrooms or university departments, or at work-related events.”
