That would be suicide for my long term viability in the VI and in other politics. I have real concerns for Alberts win but loyalty goes a long way for respect on the ground in the VI

No one in his camp has asked me my thoughts. He's run for 3 years and had 40% against a split vote with STT candidates who ran for a third of his time about 25% of registered Dems voted (9,000) and a significant group (1,300) didn't vote in the gubernatorial section. Fonsie doesn't lose his base and Mapp people will vote. Albert should not celebrate.

Right now I'm focused on running for the DPCC co-chair position after Nov election its 3 people now and was Steve Israel's position. I can win that with the current members running for other spots (Hakeem Jeffries is one of the co-chairs) so I'm focused on raising money and campaign for likely red to blue candidates.

Tell me when you're in NYC and I'd love to come and talk with you about it. I'm in DC/NY month of Aug and beginning Sept. I'll focus on VI planning after Nov outcome. But I'm trying to do a decision tree based on VI election, congressional election, and what 2020 looks like
