Hi Jeffery,

Thanks for the questions,

We are social animals and have a whole hormonal system which needs to be activated by touch. We also live in a dominance and social hierarchy and these are important for the smooth functioning of the psychology. Not only the psychological side but also the physical side, we are imbedded in a structured environment and many factors eg the 24 hour light and dark cycle, are embedded in our bodily rhythms. So we are creatures of our environment and isolation from it, (Unless one is a bear in hibernation and specially adapted) will bring some bodily and mental dysfunction. Remember sensory isolation destroys your mental world.

We are all in Monaco now for three days any chance of seeing you? Alain tells me that you have considerable publicity!

Will be in contact on my return, is there a possibility of seeing you in Paris, since you don't come to London?

Best wishes,
Peter
