yes , or in paris if i come earlier. what are you working on? do you think there is any fundamental reason why biology has not opened its mysteries to mathematics?
Possibly, he consistency of the failures of the attempts of making conceptual math-biology points toward an interesting psychological mechanism generating the strive to achieve it.

if one looks at probabily distributions. it could appear that the curve is a result of being acted on by a pseudo force. pushing agents towards the center. the activity of change more along the curve ( membrane ) one agen moves up the other down so the distribution remains the same?

At harvard last week i hosted a group discussing deception. . the cost benefit. . camaflouge. misinforation, disimformation. etc , the feelign was that the role of your ergo could be the system designed to read the inner workings of your predator or your prey. . instilling false signals , is a cheap protection.

anyway hope to see you soon
