Kathy would be great and it would be perceived very positively by the marketplace.

There are two downsides: (1) the job is truly 24/7 and the demands (travel, client/partner management) of running a global firm like Latham make my job look like a breeze, and (2) related to the demands, it will be impossible for Kathy to practice law.

So my view, Kathy taking this on would be a real mitzvah for Latham, but at a huge personal/professional cost to Kathy.

And happy to speak with her, if she'd like to.
