Dear Richard,

Was Mr. Epstein satisfied with the photos?

I will work further on the columns and the rest of the Library. The hard work was done long time ago, when I came with Bart and we worked on the oak grain.

You see, when the oak grain is "closed" the wood looks like plastic more than wood. You have to open the grain by using the steel brush. Oak is very hard wood and the only way to open the grain is with steel wire brush, than it will come alive. This week, all I have to do is apply the topical finish, which does not take much time. The preparation takes time. I am working on the horizontal surfaces and cabinet doors now and I will finish them tomorrow. I will check everything and Friday I will do the touch ups. If Mr. Epstein will request another set of pictures, I will be glad to take it again.

Just for your information, in the US, we are using four major types of Oak wood: 1. rift oak, the very best straight and elegant grain. 2. Quarter-saw, second best. 3. White oak and 4. red oak.

Brandon

PS. Mr. Epstein requested that I will finish the Globe bases. The work on them will be completed tomorrow night or Friday morning.
