Actually there is a big difference between me and a drug addict. When I'm in a comfortable situation doing everything I like with nothing to worry about and with someone I love I don't feel any need to escape. I don't want to be left on my own. A drug addict feels the need to escape even in the most comfortable and stress free situation. The other difference is that the state and the situation that I want to reach is perfectly reachable in real life and most of it can be solved with money (except for love). Contrary, with drugs you escape in a totally fictional world that doesn't exist in real life and the only way to go back to it is taking more drugs.
