Jeffrey

Everything went very smoothly on Thursday with the installation of all of the shades from Room & Board and additional deliveries from Artefacto.

Karyna's kitchen is almost done and the next apartment we will work on is 11J now that her parents have left. All we need to do in there is remove the ceiling fixtures and some touch up in the living room and bedroom. One of the Venetian plaster walls was damaged by water from above. Do you to spend the money to replace this it should we just paint the wall?

Anthony and I are going to meet to generate a punch list for all of the apartments.

I spoke to Duggal at length about the large photos for 71st street. The aluminum panels can only be 14' x 5' so I don't think that is not an option. What we came up with was printing the photos on Art Canvas and then have them stretched in the house and they could be attached on cleats that are secured to the frame. There is nothing we can apply to the murals to protect them to then wallpaper the photos over them without the glue pulling off the mural when they are removed.

Please let me know if you want me to price out this canvas idea?

As for the refund for the Artefacto pieces that came damaged they still have not addressed this after persistent contact with them. Rich and I will call them this afternoon to try again to resolve this.

They still owe us a delivery of Karyna's night tables and a pair of Lounge chairs for Palm Beach. Both are due to arrive in Miami on May 20th.
