i wish you well. yes it it true that you have no manners. its ok manners can be learned. i wasn't insulted , pointing out that you don't say "thank you", which in new york is very importnat custom, was meant to help you succeed. the person that told me you needed guidance was you. not [REDACTED], the word "help" makes you upset. . guidance direction , mentorship. is the type of help i was referring to. I told you that not asking for directions when someone is lost . seems silly to me . When you decide , if ,you decide to ask my advice , re schools or jobsm I will give it freely. and gladly. your frustration needs to turn in motivation for change not drama. again , you can email me when you are ready.

Dear Jeffrey,

Hope you are doing good!

I am sorry, but I don't think that there's any point to meet up anymore, as every time I went I had a feeling that I didn't really understood what I was doing there. Even more that after the last meeting you told to [REDACTED], that I have no MANNERS and I don't know how to say THANK YOU! ( that really upsets me!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!)

Well I guess THANK YOU VERY MUCH FOR YOUR TIME, JEFFREY!

Also I never asked you for the help and I will not, as I don't need anything from you.
Everything is good with me. I don't who told you that I have problems, as I don't!!! (I guess Someone else does!)

Also just want to make sure that this is the only email that I am speaking to you directly and not from [REDACTED], as it is not my email, but [REDACTED].

Wish you the best!
